5. PLACES TO VISIT

Serra da Lousã /

Lousã Mountain

- Lousã is a municipality in the district of Coimbra, in the central part of Portugal.
- The oldest evidence of a human presence in this territory dates back to the period of the Roman occupation of the Iberian Peninsula (3rd century BC- 4th century AD).
- Several types of mills, including paper and saw-mills, carpentry, olive-oil, liqueur, and wine production have allowed the municipality to transform from agricultural to manufacturing/services.
- In later years, tourism has developed into a strong growth industry, being visitors mostly attracted by the Serra da Lousã and the curious Aldeias de Xisto (Schist Villages), along with other local patrimony and natural resources.
- 58.6% of its territory is forested, 17.2% in use by agriculture, 22.1% uncultivated/unused, 1% hydrographic resources, while only 2% is inhabited.
- Many of its residents commute to the city of Coimbra for work, shopping, attend schools, including the Coimbra University, or for medical services.

Mata do Buçaco /

Buçaco National Wood

- Oasis of diversity

- Buçaco National Wood (Mata Nacional do Buçaco) is in the NorthEast of the mountain with the same name, in the center region of Portugal. At 549 m altitude, its geographical situation gives it a peculiar climate with warm temperatures and frequent precipitation and morning dew, which favour its great biodiversity.
- To the South the vegetation is typically mediterranean and in the northern slopes the vegetation is of a moderate climate.
- It is 105 hectares wide and it has about 250 different species of trees and shrubs with remarkable specimens, found in four different landscapes:
- Arboretum; Gardens and Fern Valley; Heritage Relic Forest and the Marquis's Pinewood.
- In the woods there are some buildings of interest: the Holy Cross Convent (Convento de Santa Cruz); a Via Sacra with different chapels; the Palace Hotel of Buçaco and the old forest rangers houses have been refurbished as turistic apartments for rent.
- It is now run by a Foundation that organises different tracks through the forest, caters for school visits, and there is a cafeteria and a shop.

Pinhal de Mira Praia de Mira

Mira Pinewood Mira Beach

- Considered to be the heart of "Gândara" region, Mira is located in the central coastal region of Portugal, between Figueira da Foz and Aveiro. It consists of three different habitats: forest zone, wetlands and coastal dune area. These are privileged places for the observation of nature and landscape, as well as for environmental education actions.
- A large area of this county is covered by a wild pine forest, where once a large mobile dune system, almost devoid of vegetation, invaded ponds and arable land. At present, this brave pine forest, also composed of a few meandering pines and several cypresses, presents a very diversified sub-covering composed of heather, wild broom, gorse, lavender, field rosemary and, in damp depressions, black-bellied plover, gourds, cane and reed. In the wet lands there some old water mills still going.
- Among this luxuriant vegetation are wild boars, foxes, rabbits, hares, badgers and on the crowns of trees, winged eagles, vulture-kestrels, cuckoos, woodpeckers, jays, owls, barn owls and various other winged creatures flutter.
- In the coast line we find beaches of wide sand, great for bathing and water sports. Of these beaches we highlight the beach of Mira, formerly called Palheiros (straw huts) of Mira still with old palafitic wooden buildings on stilts, located by the sea, an example being The Chapel of Nossa Senhora da Conceição and the Ethnographic Museum. This beach stands out for its environmental quality that for 25 consecutive years is the only one in Portugal, certified with the award of the Blue Flag of Europe. On this coast of Mira it is still possible to find “arte xávega”, an ancestral fishing practice, with its peculiar boats with raised bow, fishing sardines and horse mackerel.

Castelo de Montemor

Montemor Castle

- Montemor is a small town by the river Mondego, and half way between Coimbra and Figueira da Foz, the nearest beach.

- Is situated in a prime location, on a hill with views to the plain and very fertile fields by the river. The full name of the place is “Montemor o Velho”, meaning “the old big hill” probably because this castle is supposed to be the oldest of Portugal, with a chapel dated from the 12th century.

- By then the kingdom of Portugal had just been founded in the north and this was a helpful base for its expansion towards the south.

Jardim Botânico

Botanic Garden

- The Botanical Garden (Jardim Botânico) of the University of Coimbra, is located in the heart of the city of Coimbra. The garden was commissioned in 1722 by Marquis of Pombal. Today it remains a fabulous and fun place to visit with family and friends.

- In this garden, visitors walk through the Avenue of lime trees, one of the emblematic places of the garden, which brings to mind former public tours of European cities. Here, the pleasant scenery changes seasonally. In May/June, the garden is filled with a pleasant scent of flowers. Visit the large greenhouse, constructed in 1856 and one of the oldest buildings made of iron in Portugal. Stroll through the Tropical Corner and see exotic species from all over the world.

- The Botanical Garden is a beautiful place to spend the day, and an amazing way to learn more about the flowers, trees and plants in our lives.

Biblioteca Joanina

King John Library

- The university library in Coimbra.

- J.K. Rowling is said to have taken inspiration for Harry Potter’s Hogwarts from the library (down to resident bats that eat the insects that would otherwise destroy the books), as did the creators of Disney’s new Beauty and the Beast. But even someone like me, who has no interest in these movies, couldn’t help but be moved by the weight of the centuries and all the stories that must have unfolded inside.

Alta de Coimbra The Upper Part of Coimbra (Unesco Heritage)

- And then there’s Coimbra, the medieval capital. A popular fado song has it that “Coimbra is a lesson of dream and tradition.” And in the country’s historical landmarks, from the graves of the first Portuguese kings to the Santa Cruz convent to the University of Coimbra that was created by King Denis I in 1290.

- It’s now a living academic centre as well as a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The gilded, frescoed high-Baroque Joanine Library—commissioned in 1717—alone would be worth a day trip for its grandeur and its thousands of ladder-walled books that date from the 15th to the 19th century.

6. PROJECT "OUR FORESTS - OUR FUTURE"

- Our school has been carrying out the Our Forests Our Future 2014/17 Project of the European Union's Erasmus + Program, approved under the ERASMUS + program, in partnership with schools in Spain, Finland, the Netherlands, Lithuania and Romania.
- The project intends to involve the entire school community and achieve several objectives:
 - develop mathematical literacy, critical thinking and problem-solving skills;
 - develop entrepreneurship capacity; open the school to the community and the surrounding environment;
 - promote citizenship and tolerance, accepting cultural differences;
 - improve communication skills in English;
 - improve the use of information and communication technologies;
 - combat early school leaving.
- The selection of teachers and students to participate in an international meeting had to comply with several criteria, including participation in project activities, success in Mathematics, good behaviour and low income families.
